Soon after, Tomo slips into a coma and it is clear that his life is in danger. For the first time in their lives, Maja and Ivo face a serious challenge. When the Croatian War of Independence ended, Bosnian Croats whose villages had been destroyed in the fighting were forced to relocate. They were rehoused as refugees in the homes of Croatian Serbs who had left Croatia. Now, the Serbian owners are returning and the Croatian residents are facing an uncertain future. Somewhere in this powder keg atmosphere, an old man called Jozo, a Bosnian Croat, disappears without a trace. The police officer Filip, who also lives in a Serbian house, is entrusted with the case. Everyone believes that a returning Serb has murdered Jozo, but Filip launches an in-depth investigation, determined to be unbiased and fair, even though he has his own ghosts from the past to deal with. Through his relationship with his father, Filip tries to understand the real reasons for the old man's disappearance. The Enchanting Porkers

DIRECTOR Ivan Livaković
120' | black comedy, satire

Money is not enough anymore. Fame is the most sought-after currency. A journalist decides to do everything in her power to get a scoop, including fabricating a story. She will stop at nothing to succeed; she will destroy lives if she has to. Soon we discover that her supposed victims are more than willing to play the game, even if it means exploiting their own tragedies. It is hard to beat the 'fame machine', especially when it chooses to replace you with a newer model. Set somewhere between reality and illusion, The Enchanting Porkers is a satirical anti-musical dealing with the media clichés that dominate our everyday lives.

Anka is a timeless children's fairy tale, set in the bucolic countryside of Central Europe at the turn of the 20th century. It is a story about the quest for love and acceptance, revealed through the adventures of Anka, an orphan girl who bravely sets off in pursuit of a home, facing life's hardships, and finding her place through the help of a magical world and its mysterious forest creatures. Running away from her evil custodians, Anka finds what she is looking for in the most improbable of places – a brick making factory, and in the most improbable of men – the 'Brazilian', a rebellious and free-spirited factory worker whose damaged adulthood, torn by temptation and a traumatic past, stands in harsh contrast to Anka's pure and hopeful childhood. Their fates will intertwine, as they embark on an emotional, adventure-packed journey that will bring them to the realization that, as a family, they can offer each other the companionship and care that fate has deprived them of.

The film follows the journeys of a dozen people on a late autumn day, in a small Bosnian town, as vast flocks of migrating cranes fly overhead. Laid out in a non-linear manner, a series of seemingly unconnected scenes gradually reveal various links between the characters. The central motif connecting them is the bizarre and unexplained suicide of a retired teacher. His funeral plays a central role in the narrative. After the funeral, the various individual stories slowly come to a close, as the cranes disappear from view. The funeral bell tolls, signifying the possible death of one of the other characters: an open-ended question that remains unanswered as the final credits roll.

The first part consists of observational documentary footage, in which the camera follows events chronologically at the Gredelj locomotive factory, from the suicide of the factory trade union's chief deputy, to the factory's bankruptcy one week later. The second part follows the director of this feature film, as he rehearses scenes for the film with the real characters from the first documentary sequence, in the factory premises. 2015 | 100' | romantic comedy

Verica, a pastry-shop worker, Brankica, an opera singer and an American abroad called Martin are the protagonists in this story about loneliness and the eternal search for love. We also encounter two nurses who think a lot about men, a farmer with rather unusual farming talents, a seriously ill woman with unusual sexual tastes and a handyman who adores 'all pretty women'. As the story unfolds, a series of accidental events entwines the destinies of these disparate characters, and seemingly insoluble situations and problems are ultimately resolved. It may seem rather unlikely that several cockroaches, beetroot soup and an opera aria can play an important role in this process, but in this character-driven romantic comedy, that is exactly what they do.

Running away from her violent mother, Lina (7) meets Nika (17) and Nikolina (40). Gradually, we realise that these three female characters share a single destiny. The two older women act as a symbolic mirror, providing a glimpse into Lina's own future. Their brief interaction with Lina also changes the course of their own lives and reveals a violent secret. This is a movie about love, but it is not a love story. The young girl is desperately seeking motherly love; the mother is trying to find the courage to be a loving parent. This is no ordinary story of boy-meets-girl. Two young people fall in love, but they come from neighbouring villages, divided by different religions and different ethnicities. The people around them disapprove strongly and are dead-set against their relationship – it is difficult to overcome a deep-rooted hatred. The story is told in three parts, each taking place at a ten-year interval, from the early 1990s to the present. We follow six different lovers over three consecutive decades, each character in each decade played by the same actor. By speaking about the inter-ethnic hatred that is so well known in our region, our story aims to speak of hatred in general – the hatred and mistrust of the Other.

Finally, the father of the younger girl appears. He wants to teach her tormentors a lesson but he crosses the line. The film becomes a parable of the complexities of human nature. It touches on the source of evil and aggression, and patterns of human behaviour. Lovebirds is a modern love story that tries to connect two completely different eras in a fun, romantic way, while paying homage to a 1970 classic Croatian film One Song a Day Takes Mischief Away. We follow a young couple's first date and their subsequent intimate moments in the locations where the original movie was filmed. Lovebirds is structured as a sequence of spontaneous events, unpretentious dialogue and situations to which the viewer can easily relate. The knowing use of film locations from the original movie helps to blur the line between reality and fiction.

There, the father tries to save the life of a man who has just had a serious heart attack: his patient is struggling to breathe and is unable to move because of the strong, intense pain. Big Frather

DIRECTOR Milivoj Puhlovski
61' | digibeta

Big Frather depicts life in an urban micro-environment (Martićeve Street 14, D-F, Zagreb) from the perspective of a statue of Friar Grgo Martić. The statue can be seen as representing surveillance and the control of anonymous destinies that we usually associate with 'Big Brother'. Friar Martić's peaceful memorial sits in a small park which serves as a collective toilet to hundreds of neighbourhood pets. This 50-metre stretch of parkland with seven cafés and two glazed building staircases comprises seven micro-worlds, which form a kind of microcosmic segment of an urban metropolis. The film was shot over two years in all seasons and all weathers, mostly by hidden cameras.

This film tells the tragic story of Ana Dragičević from Rijeka, who was committed to the psychiatric institution of Lopača at the age of sixteen in an attempt to 'cure' her of homosexuality. It asks whether the injustice she experienced is merely an aberration in a system that normally functions well, or a symptom of a more widely accepted social climate which can serve as a metaphor for a 'sick' society. Above all, this is an emotional film about a girl who needs to re-establish her faith in people.

According to statistics, the average male citizen of Sisak breathes clean air, smokes like a chimney and has one leg; and the average female citizen of Sisak breathes clean air, smokes like a chimney and has one breast. Fear, listlessness, inertia and resignation are rife among the people of Sisak. Polluters poison them, and polluters feed them. We hear the confessions of three people struggling with illness and the parallel story of a city marked by fear and apathy: politicians that do not care about the citizens, polluters that do not care about pollution, eco-activists and youth activists to whom no one pays attention and the only reliable and regular events that follow each other rhythmically and relentlessly – the funerals.

Many commentators blame the supporters of two football clubs, Red Star Belgrade and Dinamo Zagreb, for the final break-up of Yugoslavia. The riot that broke out between rival fans at the Maksimir Stadium in Zagreb on May 13 1990 is often regarded as a foretaste of the war that would soon follow. Hoping to find out what exactly happened that day, two journalists start searching for people who took part in this now-historic event; one tracking down five fans in Serbia, the other doing the same in Croatia. They listen to their stories from today's perspective, and ask them to finish the game that was cut short by the violence on the football terraces. In 1990, the interrupted match was supposed to decide which team would become champion of the Yugoslav football league. The game that the fans must play today should settle much larger and more important issues.

DIRECTOR Dana Budisavljević
2/2015 | 52'/80'

This film centres on an extraordinary woman, Diana Budisavljević. In 1942, she initiated a rescue operation that lasted until 1945, and helped to save and re-home over 10,000 children held captive in Ustaše concentration camps. In terms of its scope, this was the largest European rescue mission carried out during World War II. When the war ended, Diana's mission was forced into obscurity because it did not conform to the ideology of the Yugoslav communist regime.

Kupa · Kupa River

DIRECTOR Goran Dević
12/2014 | 110'

The film follows the lives of citizens of the city of Sisak, on the banks of the Kupa River, through different seasons. The Kupa runs right through the centre of Sisak and is, in a historical sense, the main reason why the city was built there. In winter it turns into a large, uncontrollable waterway that often freezes; in summer it meanders gently and becomes a popular recreational resort for the people of Sisak. The depiction of summer life on the Kupa creates a portrait of the city in a time of rapid change.

Vještica u raljama života The Witch in the Jaws of Life

The Witch in the Jaws of Life is the story of Dubravka Ugrešić, an icon of the Yugoslav cultural and social scene who has lived in exile ever since the breakup of Yugoslavia. Because her writing challenged prevailing orthodoxies about nationalism, fascism, war and war profiteering during the Croatian War of Independence, she became the target of an unspeakable media hate campaign. Exposed to constant attacks and threats, she decided to leave Croatia. For over 20 years she has refused to engage with her cultural home or the Croatian media, convinced that nothing has changed since the time when she was denounced as 'a witch to be burned at the stake'.

There are 36,000 Croatian women working in Italy as auxiliary nurses, housekeepers and companions, caring for old, ill and powerless Italians whose families cannot cope unaided. Jagoda has been doing this job for 17 years, supporting her family and paying for their relatively comfortable life in Croatia. During the transition from a planned to a free-market economy in post-war Croatia, many companies have gone under while others were asset-stripped and industrial production has come to a halt. Modern Croatia cannot provide work for all its jobless families, depriving them of a dignified human existence. This is why Jagoda came to Italy as a young retiree with a university degree, where she has been working hard for a very long time.

Ženska svakodnevica Daily Lives of Women

Women have had access to education, work and professional careers for decades now, just like their male counterparts. Yet their biological function remains: they still give birth to children. They also take care of them and perform the lion's share of household chores. This inescapable fact induces a sense of guilt, incompleteness and inadequacy among some women who are accustomed to pursuing their own interests and intellectual endeavours. Some even develop a sense of inferiority in comparison to women who have less demanding jobs and who find motherhood fulfilling in its own right.

Generacija '68 - Generation '68

DIRECTOR Nenad Puhovski
52' | colour, B&W

The filmmaker pays homage to the generation of '68 that shared his youthful enthusiasm and the idea of a revolution that was to change the world. At the same time he questions the true impact of these changes on a social level and – as importantly – a personal level. Having ideas is easy; making them work in practice and making them look credible to others is harder. By rejecting the ideals of Generation 1968 as unworkable, younger generations are creating their own alternatives: new ideas that may be even more unrealistic...

This is a true story, although it may resemble a legend or even a romantic folktale. Its stage is the city of Rijeka, a city that was built by and fought over by Austrians, Italians, Serbs and Croats. While a specific building, architectural feature or fragment of infrastructure can throw some light on Rijeka's past; Maksimilijan Peč (born in 1914) is an actual living witness of its history. Born as an imperial citizen, he played there as a child during the Futurist movement, attended school under the Habsburg Monarchy, worked there in times of fascism, helped to build the new city during communism, met the pope after retiring and now, under democracy, has joined the European Union.

The film begins with a brief overview of the normal everyday lives of the members of the Independent Podsused Military Brigade, both at home and at work. However, the cinematic language hints at a certain shift from their daily routine – a routine that could be seen as the quintessential schedule of the so-called ordinary man. Zagreb '52 • Zagreb '52

This is an observational documentary film about Zagreb, or rather about the part of it that is only just emerging. It shows the Croatian capital from an utterly wondrous and shifted visual perspective in which the sentimental verses of old music hits and nostalgic memories from our parents' and grandparents' black and white photographs gave way to today's cold and poignant image of the city landscape. The newly built residential complex Novi Jelkovec represents a paradigm of a contemporary paradise. The paradise, however, cannot reach its full potential without its future inhabitants and their daily activities. The author wishes to record the transitional period in the creation of this large new space within an old city during which the possibilities are still endless, the perspectives of liveliness and loneliness continually alternate, and the outcome is unpredictable.

Branko Trajkov Trak is a professional rock drummer and a pioneer of therapeutic drumming in Croatia. Trak has achieved extraordinary results with people with special needs, but twelve-year-old Zrinka is a tough case. DIRECTOR Helena Bulaja and a group of children
35'

Oncology and I is a documentary anthology about the seven stages through which a child diagnosed with cancer progresses, along with their family. The first stage is separation; the second is admission to hospital; the third is chemotherapy; the fourth is pain; the fifth is fear; the sixth is loss and physical changes; and the seventh and final, though not always inevitable stage is death. In order to tell their stories in an authentic way, the children featured in this documentary assume the director's role, guided by the professional film crew.

Tusta

DIRECTOR Andrej Korovljev
1/2015 | 50'

This is a musical documentary biography dedicated to Branko Črnac Tusta, the recently departed frontman for Kud Idijoti, a legendary punk-rock band from Pula. What made Tusta special were his powerful and unrelenting antifascist convictions and his status as a Balkan 'working class hero'. Tusta and Kud Idijoti were the voice of the young generations growing up in the 1980s and 1990s. They were banned in the 1990s on most radio stations and branded as 'traitors to their country' because of their punk cover version of The Red Flag: a fact that speaks volumes about Tusta's commitment to the fight for tolerance, peaceful coexistence and social justice at a time when these values were stigmatised as 'communist'. There were no politicians at Tusta's funeral, but hundreds of people from all of the Former Yugoslav Republics travelled thousands of kilometres to say goodbye to the musical 'Che' of this region.

Petar od kule Petar of the Tower

DIRECTOR Željko Kipke
24' | digibeta

The artist Petar Brajnović lives and works on the Brajnović family estate in the village of Golo Brdo. He lives like a hermit in a tower that could easily have been designed by Gaudi. To a great extent, Petar's art and life reflect his surroundings – like the untamed countryside around him he is wild and unpredictable, and he has an ingrained disregard for the rules of a conventional artistic career. In other words, Petar's approach to art is inseparable from his everyday existence.

Four people from an island in Dalmatia ruminate on eternal questions such as 'who do you love more, your mother or your wife?' or 'where is my money?' What unites them is the way they earn their money. Over 300 years ago, a Greek priest came to the Croatian island of Krapanj and taught the locals how to dive for sponges. Our protagonists all come from families that still make their living by harvesting natural sponges from the sea.

Ana the Square is a film about the visible and invisible people we see every day in the city. We first meet Ana in the city's main square, which is the place where she feels most at home. Over forty years, she has built up a personal system of existence which suits her perfectly. Gradually, she has become a familiar feature of the square. While the traffic, trams and busy crowds keep moving, she remains in the square, and always in the same spot. Zorka is an important person in Ana's life – she sells calendars in the spot next to her. DIRECTORS Ana Opalić, Dalia Noa Pintarić

One More Time follows five lesbian women, who are also friends, over the span of five years, from 2007 to 2013. The film focuses on their romantic relationships, friendships, activism and creative work. It arose from the filmmakers' desire to examine their own lives from a wider perspective; and to examine their lifestyle in the light of discrimination and the marginal position of the LGBT community in society. Their film explores the ways in which their private lives intersect with political and social reality. Throughout the film, they approach these issues from a personal perspective, and an autobiographical point of view.

The End of Light was inspired by the poem Journey to the End of the Route by Josip Sever. Sever's poem explores the importance of the path as a goal in its own right. Kino Crvena zvijezda The Red Star Cinema

I spent most of the year 1991 filming in war-torn regions of Croatia for Croatian Television. My main subject was the town of Vinkovci, where I grew up. In autumn 1991, a missile hit the city library, destroying the entire building along with the one next to it – the Red Star Cinema. Two years later, amid the ruins, I came across the remains of some old films. Just recently I enlarged the images: one is a 1965 black-and-white picture of the promenade along the Old Bridge at Mostar. The other films were unusable, their images dissolved into abstract blurs. These images look fantastic, but beyond their superficial attraction they carry a message of decay, disrepair, and entropy. These sequences contain the entire whirlwind of war, my inability to break free from it, and the feeling of total loss that it has inflicted on me.

Talking Hands is an intimate portrayal of an aspect of our social selves, expressed through gestures or simple hand movements. A hand isolated in a single cinematic frame reflects the behaviour, mood or values of its owner, and also the wider context of that person's place in the world. At the same time, our hands often escape our control and seem to communicate independently with other hands, using a shared language, as if they have a will of their own.

What is the purpose of 'the people' in films? Do they populate the streets, buses and trains, restaurants and dance halls simply to make the movie characters seem 'normal'? What would cinematic reality look like if the heroes were erased and the background characters and extras remained as the only inhabitants? We the People uses excerpts from famous movies and Guy Debord's Situationist texts to consider the nature and 'social' position of the individuals without individuality who surround our movie heroes – the only ones who are allowed to feel, suffer, or enjoy the drama of life on film.

Od analognog do digitalnog From Analogue to Digital

Nature is analogue and analogue is natural, unique and unrepeatably. At first glance, it might look rather chaotic or imperfect. It is human nature to try to improve things and make them 'better'. We break down objects into smaller components, analyse and reassemble them, making them more 'perfect' – digitised. Digitising starts off as a simple process but becomes more and more complex, in the end almost as complex as the analogue signal itself. We try to simplify the nature of things so we can put them into easily understandable frames, while sub-consciously we reconstruct the nature of things through ourselves. We often forget that, in our essence, we also came to be from this 'simple' analogue nature. No matter which path we take, we always try to get back to our source of origin – consciously or not.

This film analyses in great detail two experimental films made by Ivan Ladislav Galeta: Water Pulu 1869-1896 and Piramidas 1972-1984. We learn about the ideas Galeta had in mind when he started and the conclusions he reached during the process. This film focuses on his structuralist approach, where the cinematic form is subjected to numeric principles. It is an attempt to build numeric relations into the structure of a film and to use a formula as a means of determining the use of film techniques.

There Was This Guy is an omnibus directed by seven female authors. Each of them chooses her own storytelling technique to tell her unique love story. Each story begins with a symbolic there was this guy... a phrase that is often used in a typical woman's conversation, in which women try to figure out the meaning of their relationship and connection to that special someone. DIRECTOR Frano Petruša
5' | digibeta | 3D

This animated film follows the battle between a small boy and the unwelcome sensation of boredom. The root cause of his ennui lies in his parents' busy schedule. The youngster does not want to drown in the sadness of a rainy day. Because he does not know how to define the unpleasant feeling of being bored, he leaps around the room, tiring himself out. Then he sits down and starts sketching on a piece of paper. At first, as a way of identifying the feeling inside him, he draws ugly characters. The small boy's drawings come alive and he invents a new game called 'defeating the Boredom'.

Industrija - Industry

DIRECTOR Livio Rajh

A lone hero fights against numerous enemies, wins women's hearts, kills a huge monster that is destroying the city and returns a stolen purse to a sweet grandmother. What is more, he achieves all this in just one episode of the show in which he stars. As soon as filming is over, our hero is confronted with the harsh reality of the film industry: the main protagonist is easily replaceable. The industry has finally devised a way to make lead characters constantly available, thanks to the cruel novelty of cloning.

10 stvari koje treba znati o jelenima • 10 Things You Need To Know About Deer

We are all aware of the negative aspects of routines, of living our lives like trains following tracks, laid out by months and years of repeating the same routes, movements and ideas. On the other hand we see that in nature, things move in harmony and in cycles, guided by paths, orbits, and opposing and attractive forces. The conflict embedded in this idea of routine as both harmonious and detrimental lies at the centre of this story.

Arktički pirat The Arctic Pirate

This is a story of altruism and exploitation, wrapped up in the guise of a Christmas tale. If Santa Claus really existed, how would he compete in a crowded market? Would he even survive as an entrepreneur? Like most stories about Santa Claus, this one starts with the usual Christmas setting and with children longing for their presents to arrive. However, the Santa Claus in this story is a symbol of the unselfish, genuine giver: an ideal philanthropist, in conflict with the law and with his superior rival, a slave-owning capitalist toy manufacturer.

Transparent Man is about a man whose secrets are known to everybody, from the state to corporations. Moving through a world filled with scanners and surveillance algorithms, while frivolously using different social networks, online forms and credit cards, the man of today loses his privacy voluntarily. Anybody can break into his personal sphere, whether their motives are benevolent or self-interested.

2016 | 2D

London, in the mid-19th century: the famous detective Gloria Scott and her faithful companion Mary Lambert are spending a quiet evening together. Right in front of their office, however, an unknown murderer kills Professor Janson, and they are faced with a new challenge. A distress call, carried on the wind, takes them on an adventure, where they uncover a great conspiracy involving the Archbishop of Canterbury, Madame Tussaud, the Holy Spirit in the body of a dove... and a few innocent victims. After a series of hazardous events and a showdown between Gloria, Mary and Madame Tussaud, the entire museum is burnt to the ground, and with it the only real villain in this story. That person is Professor Janson's murderer, a young painter known only as A. H.
